

The Ojas Scorecard and Tracker

A Simple Guide to Scoring

THE OJAS SCORECARD is a self-assessment tool, not an exact science. You can jump straight to the scorecard and use your judgment to determine your scores, or use the scoring guide for clearer targets and a more accurate and reflective assessment of your progress.

Your score (0–10) for any habit is based on two factors: the mastery level of the habit and your consistency in maintaining that level. The tables on the following pages will help you easily identify your score for each habit.

THE THREE LEVELS OF MASTERY

Your Ojas journey progresses through three tiers of achievement for each habit:

- Catalyst (Scores 1–3): You are introducing the core habit in small ways, e.g., 2–5-minute breaks.
- Consolidator (Scores 4–6): You are achieving a moderate quantitative goal, e.g., 10–15-minute breaks.

- Alchemist (Scores 7–10): You are performing at or near the ideal level, e.g., 20–30-minute breaks.

HOW TO USE THE SCORING GUIDES

1. Find your level: For each habit, look at the “Daily target” column to determine your current level. (Only move to a higher level if you consistently meet the target of the previous level for 5–7 days per week.)
2. Determine your score: Use the “Consistency” columns within that level to find your final score (e.g., if you hit the “Consolidator” target for 3–4 days per week, your score is 5).
3. Record on the Ojas Scorecard (located after these tables).

*Note: This scoring assumes at least one full non-workday per week. Deduct 1 point if work is performed on all seven days.

In countries where a six-day workweek is standard, score 9 for capping five workdays and score 10 for capping all six workdays at the Alchemist level.

[†]Social Time: High-quality engagement where you feel seen or heard (e.g., in-person gatherings, phone or video calls, or shared activities such as sports, gym, or hobbies). Me Time: Intentional solitude used for recharging (e.g., reading, meditation, solo walks, or creative hobbies).⁵⁶

The Ojas Master Plan Cycle

- Baseline (Week 0): Start by using the scoring tables to assess all habits, then enter the scores in the Ojas Tracker (on the next page). Add them up for your starting Total Ojas Score out of 100. This is your baseline.
- Improvement: Follow the One Week, One Habit model. Focus on one small improvement in one habit while maintaining the progress from previous weeks. (Remember, nothing is stopping you from making other improvements if easily possible, but your focus is the habit of the week.)
- Weekly scoring: At the end of the week, revisit the score for your focused habit. Scan other habits as well: improvements often lead to inadvertent gains elsewhere (e.g., outdoor exercise may improve both sunlight exposure and sleep).
- Time-bound progress: Improvements are time-bound, not score-bound. After one week of focus, move on to the next habit, regardless of the size of the improvement in that week.
